OVERVIEW

What This Review Covers

This report walks through the campaign structure, service ad groups, ads, regional targeting, budget pacing, and final confirmation items before launch.

1

Structure

How the launch is organized now and how it can expand later if performance supports it.

2

Ad groups

Which services are staged to run ads and which priorities should be confirmed first.

3

Ads and regions

Representative ad copy examples, current regional targeting, and any New York City or ZIP changes needed.

4

Budget and confirmation

How the budget is paced through the month, then one final page for signoff.

CAMPAIGN STRUCTURE

How The Campaign Can Grow Over Time

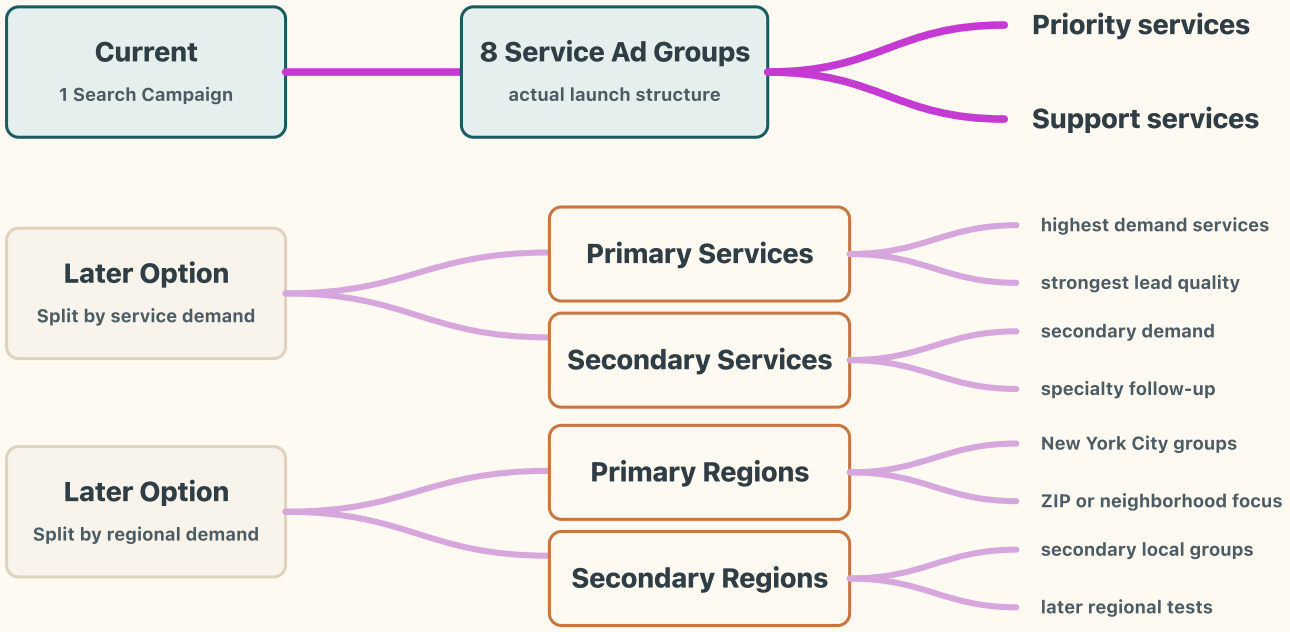
The launch starts compact. Future campaigns can split by service or region only after the data shows where separate budgets and reporting would help.

Launch shape

The current launch uses 1 controlled Search campaign with 8 service-based ad groups. This keeps early learning clean and easier to review.

Expansion rule

More campaigns should come later only when performance data shows a service or region needs its own budget, copy, and reporting focus.



One campaign now

The first launch stays compact so the early budget is not spread too thin.

Split later by proof

Future campaign splits should follow lead quality, conversion signals, and search demand.

No extra campaigns yet

The service and regional splits shown here are future paths, not active launch campaigns.

AD GROUPS

Services We Are Running Ads For

These are the service areas currently staged in the Google Ads Editor file. Confirm the list is complete and identify which services should receive the most traffic first.

Services staged for ads

8 ad groups organize therapy service intent, modality intent, and social anxiety demand for the first launch.

Keyword control

56 phrase keywords and 10 negative phrase keywords are staged. Active launch keywords use phrase match.

REGIONAL TARGETING

Where The Campaign Is Set To Reach

The current plan stays table-based so the launch geography is easy to review. Confirm the current scope or add New York City and ZIP priorities before launch.

Current targeting

The current staging file targets the approved service states. If New York City or ZIP focus areas should be prioritized, they can be added after review.

New York, United States

New Jersey, United States

LOCATION	STATUS	REVIEW NOTE
New York, United States	Staged	Approved launch geography
New Jersey, United States	Staged	Approved launch geography

New York City and ZIP review

AREA TYPE	CURRENT DETAIL	WHAT TO CONFIRM
New York City focus	Not narrowed yet	Confirm New York City or other local focus areas before launch if some areas matter more than others.
ZIP clusters	Not supplied yet	Provide ZIPs only if spend should concentrate around specific neighborhoods or offices.
Regional exclusions	None staged	Identify any places that should not receive launch traffic.

Location targeting can use countries, areas within a country, radius targets, or location groups. Source: Google Ads location targeting.

BUDGET

How We Protect Your Budget While Improving Performance

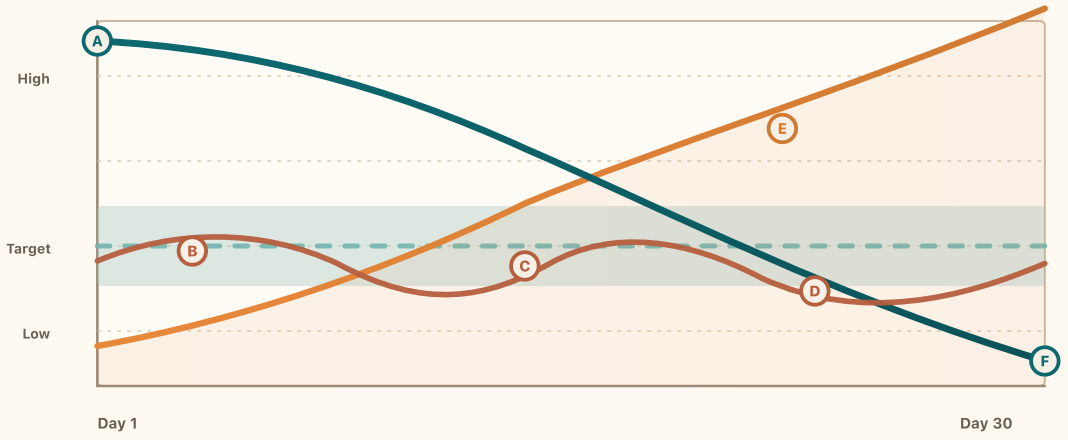
This page shows how the approved monthly budget turns into daily pacing, why spend should not be front-loaded, and how we keep room to improve once real search data appears.

APPROVED MONTHLY BUDGET	DAILY BUDGET	LOW DAILY RANGE	HIGH DAILY RANGE
$3,000	$100	$60	$145

How your budget moves through the month

The goal is to protect early spend while search terms, cost per click, and service demand become clearer.

Healthy daily range · Amount spent over time · Budget remaining · CPC and click movement



KEY	WHAT IT SHOWS
A	Most of the monthly budget is still available, so we can learn before pushing spend.
B	Day-to-day swings in CPC, demand, and clicks are normal early on.
C	We refine search terms and traffic while keeping daily spend inside the healthy band.
D	A quieter day is not always a problem. Auction conditions and CPC move too.
E	Spend steps up as results and intent become clearer.
F	Remaining budget eases down through the month instead of front-loading spend.

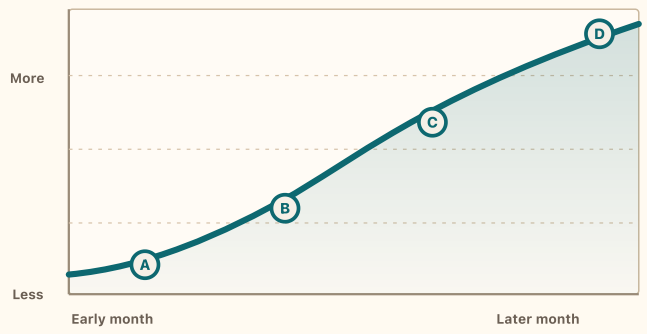
BUDGET

Why Spend Increases As Performance Gets Clearer

This page explains the operating logic behind the pacing curve. We do not spend more because the campaign is guessing. We spend more when the evidence is cleaner.

Why spend increases as performance gets clearer

Early spend is intentionally cautious. As waste is cut and signals improve, more of the same monthly budget can be committed with confidence.



STEP	WHAT IMPROVES
A	We see which searches are worth paying for before scaling.
B	Low-value traffic is trimmed.
C	CPC, conversions, and lead quality become easier to read.
D	We can raise spend because the data behind it is cleaner.

What this means for your campaign

We pace the full month

Daily spend and clicks will move. The aim is healthy pacing through day 30.

Starting lighter protects budget

Early limits leave room to learn before we push winning areas.

CPC changes click volume

The same dollars buy more or fewer clicks as auctions shift.

Later spend is intentional

Increases follow clearer performance, not random day-to-day noise.

APPROVAL

What Needs Confirmation

The campaign is valid as a staging file. This review should focus on services, ad copy, regional targeting, and budget.

Approval checklist

☑ Ad groups

I confirm the services and ad groups listed in this proposal are the right areas to run ads for, including which services should receive the most traffic first.

☑ Ads

I confirm the ad copy direction, including the headline and description variations, is accurate enough to move forward or revise from.

☑ Regional targeting

I confirm where ads should run, including the current state targeting and any New York City, ZIP, or exclusion changes needed before launch.

☑ Budget

I confirm the monthly budget and pacing approach, including that daily spend may vary while we optimize toward the monthly budget and performance goals.
